An open letter to... Donald Trump

@LyndaVsTheNet

Lynda McCarthy asks why a walking, talking 'mucus plug' can't win the election?

We're all watching you, Mr Trump

I'M DEDICATING my first open letter to you Mr. Trump because, quite frankly, I think you get a hard time of it. You've been pretty clear about what you want and it's everyone else who is getting in your way. Can't a billionaire with no political experience have a dream? A dream to be the most powerful man in the world? A dream that he conjured up a few years ago on a whim and is now throwing a tantrum because it looks like it might not come to fruition? Is that too much to ask?

And the problem isn't you, Mr. Trump. The problem is everyone else. These days you can't do any of the fun things that were allowed before. Suddenly you're running for president and it's not OK to sexually assault women, who knew? You just want to make America great again, get back to the good old days where men were men, the drinks were strong and it was legal to own another human being.

The world has gone P.C. mad. Where are the protests defending the rights of rich white men? Why is nobody standing up for people like you anymore? They're afraid, most probably - they look at you, a human ballbag, and think 'this sentient scrotum will change the world and we can't handle it'.

They're worried about your ideas you see, they see you, a rancid sack of loose flesh and pan stick foundation with some hair added for realism and see that you're a visionary of your time. You're a taboo breaker, a subversive, say-it-like-it-is mutineer who just wants the liberty to talk about his admiration for Saddam Hussein and his own daughter's ass like any potential leader of the free world.

And you know who's really at fault don't you? Hillary - a woman who has done nothing but thwart your presidential aspirations with her 'facts' and 'experience'. All that woman does is whine - it's all 'equal pay this' and 'please stop rating women out of 10' that. If she ever took a break from her lifelong devotion to her career she'd realise that sometimes a joke is just a joke, and sometimes you want to sit in a steam room with a handful of your closest billionaire buddies and have a chat about how all immigrants are rapists.

I don't live in America, Mr. Trump, but I am familiar with the concept of the American Dream - the idea that a simple-minded, bloated carcass of a person can start out with nothing more than a 14-million-dollar loan from his father and end up with access to nuclear codes is a tale as old as time.

Okay, so you're not 'book smart', but most of those people complaining that you have no fiscal or military plans for the future of their country are all paying their taxes - and you apparently gave up that practice years ago, so who's the chump now?

When I watched you during the debates, gurning and spitting like a partially plucked Muppet, I thought 'that man really speaks for the people'. Not brown people, of course, or women, Muslims or the poor... but some people. You speak to the scared ones, you fill them up with words about strength but what you're really doing is manufacturing more fear, picking at their insecurities like a scab. You tell them that they're not safe but that you'll make them safe, that you will give them jobs and protect their families. And listen, if someone who is little more than a walking, talking mucus plug with a wig can become the Republican presidential nomination in 2016, who knows what could happen?

Anyway, I just wanted to let you know that the rest of the world is watching Mr. Trump. And we will build a wall to keep you out if necessary.

Kisses,
Lynda
