EXCLUSIVE: SICKOS ARE JAIL PALS

TWO PERVS IN A POD

By RUAIRI COTTER

EVIL Graham Dwyer has found an unlikely new friend behind bars, we can reveal.

The BDSM killer, who murdered vulnerable Elaine O'Hara in 2012, has got pally with paedo Tom Humphries in Portlaoise's Midlands Prison.

A source said: "They think they're slightly better than the rest - even the guards."

FISH TOWN NETS €2M LOTTO WIN

IRELAND'S newest millionaire purchased their winning Irish Lotto ticket at a shop in a tiny fishing village, the National Lottery has confirmed.

The golden slip – worth a mammoth €2million – was bought at Mace Burrows in Kilmore Quay, Co Wexford – a village with a population of just 300.

Store owner John Brady said: "We're in absolute shock. I got the call late last night from the National Lottery and the news still hasn't sunk in."

lottery win. The only thing that keeps this store going is our incredibly loyal local customers who keep the business ticking over all year round.

"Knowing that one of these people who we see on a daily basis is waking up with a Lotto ticket worth €2million is just fantastic. We're genuinely thrilled for whoever the winner is and we'll be enjoying the celebrations with all of our customers."

Punters are being urged by Lotto chiefs to check their tickets. The winning numbers drawn were 6, 26, 27, 32, 45, 47 with a bonus of 9.

Air route boosted

AER Lingus Regional is to increase capacity on the Dublin Kerry route by 30 per cent this winter.

Operated by Stobart Air, the route will continue to be serviced by a larger aircraft, the ATR72.

Over 51,000 passengers flew the route last year.

Aer Lingus Regional currently flies up to 580 flights per week across 25 routes throughout Ireland, the UK and France.

EVIL DWYER

Ghoulish appeal... wooded murder spot was draw for thrillseekers

EVIL killer Graham Dwyer is being inundated with sick sexual fantasies from women all over the world, the Irish Sun can reveal.

Prison sources claim that the fiend, 45, is getting "bundles of letters every single day", many of them from unhinged women who indulge his deadly obsession with bondage, domination, submission and masochism, or BDSM.

As well as the "fan mail", female admirers are queuing up to visit him at Midlands Prison.

EXCLUSIVE by RUAIRI COTTER

We can also reveal that Dwyer, who murdered Elaine O'Hara before dumping her body in the Dublin Mountains in 2012, has struck up an unlikely behind-bars bromance with paedophile Tom Humphries.

A source told how the pair are "as thick as thieves", and see themselves as being above their fellow prisoners and even guards.

They revealed: "Dwyer gets a lot of attention from other women with sexual fantasies from all over the world on a daily basis."

"He has received hundreds of letters since he was locked up, which provides him with plenty of reading material."

"He's seen as some sort of twisted celebrity in the BDSM world and I suppose women are looking to realise their fantasies by writing to him."

"He's getting two visits a week from a woman, and there is no shortage of women waiting in reserve to come see him either."

Dwyer was sentenced to life without parole in 2015 after he was found guilty of the murder of O'Hara three years earlier.

The jury found he had stabbed the 36-year-old childcare worker to death on Killakee Mountain in Rathfarnham on August 22, 2012 – the day she left a psychiatric hospital.

The pair had been involved in a "master-slave" sexual relationship since 2007, when they met on a BDSM website alt.com, and exchanged more than 2,600 texts over the five years that followed.

It is believed that Dwyer was drawn to the site out of a desire to find a willing victim who would submit to his depraved fantasy of spilling blood.

Sources say that since starting his sentence, the married murderer has kept out of trouble with prison authorities and, as a result, has been granted a series of "special privileges" to make life easier.

The lag enjoys more visits than other inmates, bonuses such as the use of a toaster and a phone, and even enjoys a cell to himself, while others are forced to bunk up with two other criminals.

The former architect has also got chummy with child sex pest Humphries, who joined him in the Portlaoise slammer last October after being convicted of grooming a girl from when she was 14 years old before sexually abusing her.

A source revealed that the notorious pair have "become close" and spend a "lot of time together" behind bars.

They said: "Dwyer and Humphries are in the same wing and struck up a relationship after Humphries was sentenced last year."

"They see themselves as being on a higher intellectual level than everyone else, and you would certainly get the impression that they look down on other prisoners and even guards."

"They think they're slightly better than the rest, I suppose given their education and success in their careers before being jailed."

"Dwyer, in particular, would often try to manipulate the guards too – he is a smart man."

"As well as having himself a pal to chat to in his spare time, Dwyer has special privileges that make his time a little easier, such as the use of a toaster, a phone, a personal cell and some extra visits."

'They've struck up a surprising friendship'

"He is in there for life, so if him having a slightly easier time in prison means no trouble for the guards then people will work to make that happen."

"The two of them are in a wing which includes really high-profile rapists and murderers and a number of paedophile priests."

"They've found themselves striking up a surprising friendship among it all."

Dublin Circuit Criminal Court heard how former Irish Times journalist Humphries exchanged at least 16,000 text messages with his young victim during a three-month period leading up to March 2011 as part of the grooming process.

The beast sexually abused the girl on five occasions after asking her to meet him, and twice sent the girl pictures of his genitals.

But his jail sentence of two and a half years was slammed as "very disappointing" by campaigners.

The Dublin Rape Crisis Centre hit out at the justice system, declaring that the term "sent out the wrong message".

Chief exec Noeline Blackwell said Judge Karen O'Connor had been wrong to focus on the sports-writer's "fall from grace".

She told this paper at the time: "It's very lenient when you consider it carries a life sentence."

"It's very disappointing."

In her Victim Impact Statement, the victim spoke about having her childhood taken away from her. But from what I've heard the judge put a lot of focus on the accused and his fall from grace.

"I understand that the judge must weigh up all the factors, but the girl has been left with a life sentence in many ways and this should have been considered."

"It sends out the wrong message to victims and their families."

"A two-and-a-half-year sanction is very lenient when you take into account that the victim in this case has been left severely impacted by these crimes."

Separately, the Irish Sun recently revealed that the forest land where Dwyer murdered tragic Elaine O'Hara and dumped her body is up for sale for a cut-price sum.

The mountain-top plot – which in a macabre quirk of fate resembles the outline of a kitchen blade from above – was listed at €245,000 last July, according to a social media post by estate agent JP & M Doyle.

But after a number of reductions the wooded 46-acres on the Old Military Road in Killakee can now be snapped up for just €185,000.

We revealed in 2015 that scores of ghoulish thrillseekers were regularly calling out to the eerie spot, where only 60-65 per cent of Elaine's bones were recovered by gardai during their probe.

The Irish Prison Service said it had no comment to make when approached about the Dwyer revelations by the Irish Sun.

Holding court to vile clink clique

TWISTED Graham Dwyer is locked up with some of Ireland's most notorious inmates.

The sicko has raised eyebrows inside Midlands Prison after getting pally with paedophile journalist Tom Humphries.

But he is also doing time with a child porn pervert who stalked RTE star Sharon Ni Bheolain.

Conor O'Hara, 41, of Portmarnock, Co Dublin, was recently sentenced to three years in jail for harassing the newsreader.

Stalker... O'Hara

He also pleaded guilty to three counts of possessing child pornography on a mobile phone and on a computer hard drive.

Dwyer is also close to double killer Mark Nash, with the pair said to regularly chat over coffee.

Psycho Nash was found guilty of the cold-case murder of two women, whose mutilated bodies were found in sheltered accommodation in Grangegorman, Dublin, more than 21 years ago.

A source said: "They love drinking coffee and chatting in Dwyer's cell.

"They speak mostly about their appeals and both men are arrogant enough to think that they can get their convictions overturned."

"Dwyer sees himself as highly intelligent and superior and this doesn't go down well with his fellow lags."

Gerald Barry, who strangled Swiss student Manuela Riedo to death in Galway in 2007, is another Dwyer friend.
