Cavern Club

A STATUE of Cilla Black was unveiled in her home city of Liverpool yesterday.

The bronze memorial, commissioned by her sons Robert, Ben and Jack, is outside the original entrance to the world-famous Cavern Club where the late singer and TV presenter worked as a cloakroom girl.

Robert Willis said his mother "never really appreciated getting old but now she will be forever young".

He told onlookers: "We were overwhelmed by the incredible support after our mother died from the country but also, and especially, from the people of this great city.

"It was incredibly comforting. Something none of us will ever forget."

Botox clinics are filling up after live Amanda jab

10,000 call about beauty treatment

BY SHARON MCGOWAN

MORE than 10,000 people inquired about Botox after Amanda Bruner went under the needle on live TV, a clinic claimed yesterday.

The 42-year-old, who has been open about her love of fillers, got the treatment on The Late Late Show as blogger AJ Fitzsimons had her lips plumped.

Therapie Clinic said Friday's broadcast sparked a "staggering" spike in interest in the anti-ageing options.

Manager Deirdre O'Dowd said: "The influx of inquiries combined with our research shows Irish people are becoming increasingly inclined towards the use of injectables and fillers.

"It's not for everyone but for some people these treatments can FAN Amanda Bruner make a positive difference to their self-image and confidence."

The chain also revealed nearly half of us (47%) would consider getting Botox or fillers to slow down the ageing process.

Meanwhile, an average 521,400 people tuned in to watch the former Miss Ireland undergo the procedure.

But it wasn't without controversy as RTE said it received one formal complaint and 11 informal calls and emails.

But Amanda said she wasn't worried about being criticised.

She added: "Everyone is entitled to their opinion.

"I am simply here to show you guys what happens. Most people are too embarrassed to show you what goes on or to tell you."
